BINGO PLAYED AT 28 SYNAGOGUES AND AFFILIATES IN NEW YORK

By ALFRED K. ALLAN

NEW YORK (P-O)—The caller's voice shouted out the numbers B-12-1-16 . . . The men and women gathered around the tables in the room of the New York City synagogue stared fixedly at the cards in front of them. A tense and hushed silence hung over the proceedings.

SUDDENLY A WOMAN'S high-pitched voice cried out, "Bingo!"

It is an outcry that is being heard now in synagogues throughout the city.

The POST and OPINION has learned that since last November, when it became legal for synagogues and churches in New York City to hold games of chance under religious or benevolent auspices, some 28 synagogues and synagogue-affiliated organizations, Orthodox, Conservative and Reform, have been granted licenses to maintain such games. This despite the fact that such gambling has been roundly condemned by national Jewish organizations representing all segments of Judaism.

A spokesman for Temple B'nai Israel, where Bingo games are held on Wednesday and Saturday evenings, told The POST and OPINION that, "No one really wants to raise funds by gambling but we have no other alternative. We have tried every other possible means of raising funds but to little avail. Our members are people of modest means and are just unable to keep up the synagogue by their donations alone."

RABBI DANIEL L. DAVIS, director of the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues told The POST and OPINION, "The fact is, a synagogue's financial position actually becomes worse when it resorts to fund-raising by gambling, not better. When a synagogue turns to gambling it is, in effect, telling its members that it is no longer necessary for them to be concerned about the wellbeing of their place of worship. Bingo will take care of everything' they are now told."

Rabbi Usher Kirshblum of New Gardens Hills, told this reporter that "we teach our children not to gamble and at the same time tell them it is perfectly legal and moral for the House of God to sponsor gambling parties. No religious institution is worthy of its name nor deserves to exist if it must depend upon gambling for its survival."

Star Speakers

Key Israel and American Jewish leaders scheduled to participate in a national economic conference for Israel Bonds this Saturday, Sept. 18-20 in Chicago include (top row, left to right) Mrs. Golda Meir, Israel's minister for foreign affairs; Levi Eshkol, finance minister; Dr. Y. Foerder, chairman of Bank Leumi Le-Israel; Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, chairman of the board of governors of the Israel Bond organization; (bottom row, left to right) Abraham Feinberg, president of the Israel Bond organization; Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, vice-president; Mrs. Joseph Cherner, chairman of the national women's division; and Mrs. Ora Schweitzer, public relations director of the Atomic Energy Commission of Israel. The national economic conference officially will launch a fall campaign for Israel Bonds.

Israel Hopes to Win Passage Through Suez In United Nations

UNITED NATIONS (P-O)—Israel will play a major role in the United Nations deliberation opening Tuesday when Golda Meir, foreign minister heading Israel's delegation, seeks redress from Egypt's closing of the Suez Canal to Israeli shipping.

ISRAEL considers the chances good that she will win a victory over her belligerent Arab neighbor this time, and bases her calculations on strengthened diplomatic relations with many nations over the past few years.

But Israel's main weapon in the upcoming fight will be the legitimacy of her position that the Suez is an international waterway which must be free to all shipping. Even countries which might not be expected to side with Israel in a dispute with an Arab neighbor can be expected to vote on any action which will prevent exploitation of important waterways in international disputes.

ISRAEL expects to find staunchly at her side the western powers, and especially France. The growing friendship between France and Israel has consolidated into a solid relationship which finds the two countries fighting side by side.

In fact, in an unprecedented action, the cabinet instructed Mrs. Meir to vote with France on the Algerian question, and on her projected atomic tests in the Sahara.

Israel's support of France in Algeria is expected to lose her some of her growing influence with African and Asian nations, but not as much as might at first be thought. A number of African nations believe that France is trying to settle her Algerian problem with justice.

IN AN interview in Jerusalem over Kol Yisrael before leaving Jerusalem, Mrs. Meir declared that:

"In the past few weeks we have been active in the various capitals and have maintained close contact with foreign ministries, and it may be assumed that various delegations will make clear and forceful statements on the question of freedom of passage through the Canal."

Dinah Shore, Hubby Are Guests of Israel

Guests of the Israel bond organization, TV and recording star Dinah Shore and her actor-producer husband George Montgomery toured the Jewish state recently to see with their own eyes the projects their efforts have aided. It was their first visit to Israel and they were accompanied by their daughter Melissa Ann.

Height Handicap Seen Dooming Hopes for Winning Israeli Cage 5

TEL AVIV (P-O) — The American coach sent by the U. S. to show Israelis how basketball should be played believes that the height handicap will prevent cage teams here from successful play in international competition.

GLENN MARTIN, famed Southern Illinois U. coach, said here that no matter how good they perform, Israelis will never be able to win in international basketball. He pointed out that a tall basketball player has a natural and indisputable advantage. In the U. S., he said, a player of less than six feet has little chance, while many stars ranged past 6 feet 7 inches tall.

Martin, who was recently voted into the U. S. basketball hall of fame, expressed surprise at the high standard of Israel baseball. But, he said, the game as played in Israel is really soft-ball. The Carbondale, Ill., coach said that in all Israel there was not one full-sized baseball field.

MARTIN said that Carbondale, with its 15,000 population, has more basketball courts than in Tel Aviv with its almost half million people.

Histadrut Gives Steel Strikers $10,000

NEW YORK (P-O) — The striking steel workers got support from an unexpected quarter when Israel's General Federation of Labor, the Histadrut, presented $10,000 to the strike fund. The sum was given to David J. MacDonald, union president, by Pinhas Lavon, general secretary of the Histadrut.

Lebanese Cage 5 Forfeits To Israel

TURIN, Italy (P-O)—Rather than face an Israeli team, the Lebanese basketball team in the World university games here forfeited its contest with its Near East neighbor. The referree awarded the game to Israel after waiting 15 minutes past the scheduled time when only three Lebanese players had appeared on the floor.

Follows Her Mother

WEALTHY BRITISH JEWESS DECIDES TO MOVE TO ISRAEL

JERUSALEM (P-O)—Another member of one of the world's most famous and wealthiest Jewish families has decided to move to Israel for good.

She is attractive, blue-eyed, Mrs. Judith Gisquinto, the only daughter of M.r sRebecca Sieff, president of World WIZO.

Mrs. Gisquinto, who will follow in her mother's footsteps and transfer her "headquarters" to Israel, has been coming here on visits three or four times per year. Now she has decided "to reverse the process" and go three or four times per year to London, where her husband, like her father, is a director of the multi-million dollar Marks and Spencers chain Stores concern.

Like her father, Israel Sieff, whom she strongly resembles, she is interested in the World Jewish Congress. She is also vice-president of the Jewish National Fund in Britain.

Science Gives Data On Flood of Noah

UNITED NATIONS (P-O) — Scientific confirmation of another major account in the Bible—that of the flood—came this week from Dr. Rhodes W. Fairbridge of Columbia university. Dr. Fairbridge told the International Oceanagraphic Congress in session here that the entire ancient world was flooded by a rise in the sea level which began 6,000 years ago.

Chicago Doctors Look Into Israeli Boys' Heart

CHICAGO (P-O)—A catheterization of the left side of the heart was performed this week on a 14-year-old boy flown to Mt. Sinai hospital here from Israel at the expense of Mrs. Itzhak Ben-Zvi, wife of Israel's president.

The cathetarization was directed by Dr. Aldo A. Luisada, program director of cardiology at the hospital, on Moshe Trushinsky. The doctor first saw the patient two years ago when he was lecturing in Israel.

Cathetarization is an internal examination of the heart through a tube propelled through a vein into the heart.

Kahn Third Rabbi Legion Chaplain

INDIANAPOLIS (P-O)—Headquarters of the American Legion here said that Dr. Robert I. Kahn who was elected chaplain of the American Legion at its recent national convention is the third rabbi to hold that post.

Rabbi Kahn, a veteran of World War II, is spiritual leader of Temple Emanuel (Reform) of Houston, Tex.

Nate V. Keller, of Virginia, Minn., was named one of the five national vice commanders of the organization.

Rabbis Aid Strike At Chicago Hospital

By RON CHIZEVER
Chicago Bureau Chief

CHICAGO (P-O)—Some rabbis began siding with labor as a strike of nonprofessional workers at all-kosher Mt. Sinai hospital moved into its third week today.

MERKAZ HARABONIM (Orthodox Rabbinate) and the Chicago Federation of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations (Reform) were the first groups to ally themselves with the Union's cause.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, AFL-CIO, is picketing for recognition as bargaining agent for the workers.

THE HOSPITAL contends that, as a non-profit institution, it is exempt from collective bargaining laws, and refuses to negotiate with the union.

Rabbi Julius D. Goldman, executive director of Merkaz Harabonim, wired hospital trustees urging them to meet vith the union and reach a "settlement."

HE SENT a similar telegram to the Jewish Federation of Chicago, which financially supports the hospital.

But the federation held to a hands-off policy because, said a spokesman, the hospital is an "independent organization."

"THIS STRIKE is not good for our people," Rabbi Goldman told The POST and OPINION. "At $35 a week, these workers are underpaid. It's a terrible shame."

Another rabbi, Arnold J. Wolf of Congregation Solel, Glencoe, Ill., rose at a meeting of the 250 strikers last week to say he personally supported their battle, He counselled them to "exercise patience and dignity."

VICTOR H. GOTBAUM, Union district director, has written every rabbi here appealing for aid.

Said Marvin N. Stone, hospital board president:

"This is not a Jewish strike and there are no religiious issues."

THE 424-BED hospital, the only one in Chicago with an all-kosher kitchen, continues to operate with volunteers and other personnel.

The Chicago Rabbinical Association (Reform and Conservative) was to decide its stand in the strike at a meeting this week.

Cupid, Not Culture Making Bridge

TEL AVIV (P-O) — The bridge between the Israeli and U. S. Jewish communities continues to be strengthened without the aid of speeches or cultural contributions, but with one essential element—Dan Cupid.

D. Aviv, a New York bachelor engineer was back in the U. S., a new bridegroom, following his speedy one-month courtship of Rita Rod, beauteous sergeant in the Israel forces. Aviv met his bride when he went to visit a family here to bring them regards from friends in the U. S.

PIG-RAISERS THREATENED

JERUSALEM (P-O) — The chief rabbinate moved this week against kibbutzim who raise pigs for the thriving Israeli pork market by threatening to withhold their approval of dairy and agricultural products of their farms.

How The Israel Elections Shape Up

Herut Anti-Labor, General Zionists, Conservatives Vie for Anti-Labor Vote in Coming Elections

By EDWIN SAMUEL

This is the third in a series of articles on the platforms of the political parties in Israel, in anticipation of the national elections to the knesset this November.

On the extreme right there is the ultra-nationalist Herut ('Freedom') party which is violently anti-labor.

ITS PARTY platform includes a demand for "private initiative in the economic and social structure of the state." This was one of the basis of the old Revisionist party prior to 1948.

Herut also demands the inclusion of the whole of Jordan within the boundaries of Israel, which is ineffective in practice but enables the Arab states to claim that Israel is expansionist.

IT IS NOT known how far Herut feels bound to follow democratic precedures and how far it would resort to direct action to secure power. The Revisionist underground movement, the Irgun Zwai Leumi ('National Military organization') of pre-state days had no scruples in threatening the use of military force against other Jewish bodies in Palestine.

Herut does not accept the ordinary Zionist line of descent—Herzl, Weizmann, Arlosorov, Ben-Gurion; it has its own Pantheon of national heroes—Herzl, Nordau, Trumpeldor, Jabotinsky, Beigin.

THIS heterodox attitude is spread in its party paper, Herut, and in its youth movement, the Betar.

In order not to have anything to do with the labor movement, it maintains a separate health insurance system for its own members.

No kibbutz is affiliated to the Herut party; but there are 12 moshavim with 3 000 members who are linked with Herut.

IT MAKES an appeal to unsophisticated Jews of Middle East origin and to many unsophisticated supporters aboard of East European origin, particularly in South Africa.

Hence it can include in its party platform such meaningless demands as "social justice" and "the inalienable freedom of men."

HERUT IS A rival of the General Zionist party for the anti-labor vote in Israel. It lost to the General Zionists during the general election to the 120 seats in the knesset in 1951, but recovered its position in 1955, as the following figures show:

	Gen. Elctns.	G. Zionists	Herut
1949		8	14
1951		23	8
1955		13	15

With fifteen seats out of 120, Herut today is the second largest party in the knesset, after the right-wing socialist party Mapai with 40 seats. But few of the other political parties would be willing to enter into a government coalition with Herut because of its political extremism and irresponsibility. Negotiations for amalgamation between Herut and the General Zionists have broken down.

THE GENERAL Zionists are the Conservative party of Israel. Their platform includes demands for free private enterprise and "the achievement of economic independence through increased attraction of investment capital"—i.e. of private and not public capital.

The Histadrut's labor exchanges now having been nationalised, the General Zionist platform concentrates on the nationalisation of the health insurance services. These are largely in the hands of the Histadrut-owned Kupat Cholim ('Sick Fund') whose nationalisation would politically weaken the parties of the left. Hence its attraction to the General Zionists, who are anti-Socialist, with much support from American Zionists.

THE TEL AVIV municipal council has a bare right-wing majority with a General Zionist mayor. The General Zionists also receive much support from the Farmers' (i.e. farm-owners) association and the manufacturers' association. But it is weakened by internal rivalries between the 'reactionaries' (Rokach and Bernstein) and the 'Progressives' (Saphir and Serlin).

Its policies generally are supported by the daily Haboker (The Morning) newspaper.

The Maccabi youth organization, while theoretically independent, largely supports the General Zionists. Eighteen moshavim with a membership of 6,000 (but no kibbutzim) are affiliated with the party.

THE PROGRESSIVES are the liberal party of Israel, composed originally of Central European immigrants of the 1930s from Germany, Austria, and Czechoslovakia who found no place in the General Zionist and other parties dominated by earlier East European immigrants (from Russia and Poland).

The Progressive party is non-Socialist rather than anti-Socialist and "encourages the investment of private foreign capital and stimulates the direction of governmental and public (Histadrut) capital for development purposes in the new development areas of the country."

WITH ONLY five out of 120 seats in the knesset it is clear that it has little appeal to the working man.

It has no newspaper of its own. Although Schocken, the editor of the influential Haaretz is a Progressive member of the knesset, Haaretz claims to be non-party.

The Progressive party also claims to be "above" sectional interests (as does the almost defunct Liberal party in Great Britain). It has seven kibbutzim with 1,400 members belonging to HaNoar Hazioni ('Zionist Youth') affiliated to it. But its main appeal is to the professional classes—lawyers, etc.

ONE OF ITS leaders, Rosen, has been minister of justice for many years. Hence the emphasis in its platform on 'strengthening of constitutional rights within the state and respect for the civil rights of the individual.'

The party commands general respect in Israel, which was one of the reasons why the knesset has never adopted the proposal for unseating any party that does not get at least four per cent of the votes—which might wipe out the Progressives.

Rogosin Film Portrays in Full Cruel Curse of Apartheid

By JOSEPH GALE

"Come Back, Africa," a feature-length documentary film dealing with apartheid, the Union of South Africa's implacable separation of white and colored peoples, is one of the most powerful condemnations of white supremacy ever made.

Gale

The film, which is to open soon in England and in New York after a showing before the United Nations, is a terrible and shocking indictment of man's inhumanity to man, of the imposition of white man's civilization upon a people which did not ask for it.

It was made, largely under cover, by Lionel Rogosin, 35-year-old-director of "On The Bowery" the prize-winning film of two years ago, and "Out," a report of the aftermath of the Hungarian revolution.

THE STORY is a composite of the sort of existence faced by the average colored African every day of his life. It is seen through the eyes of a young tribal Zulu named Zachariah, whose family faces starvation in the parched, deprived countryside. Lured to Johannesburg by the prospect of earning enough money to provide for his wfie and two children, Zachariah obtains work in the gold mines near the city. Unaccustomed to white men's laws, he is shunted from his job to another and still another, from one circle of friends to another, until in a terrific climax the tragedy and terror and misery of life bursts in his brain.

Rogosin shot 120,000 feet of film, which was edited down to 8,000 feet. In this he has packed an enormous amount of living —shots of Johannesburg, which seems like any America city, but has a cancer at its breast; Sophiatown; the colored community being inexorably broken up to make room for a white suburb; the daily influx of Africans to the larger city looking for work; the roving bands of African hoodlums called "Tzotzies," who prey upon white and colored alike; the pitiful amusements that the downtrodden Africans make for themselves; the escape into a kind of tribal music, like a hypnotic release; the incredible, face-to-face treatment of Africans by their white masters; the harsh and cruel repressions which transcend anything we know in our own country.

"COME BACK, Africa," a title which derives from the national anthem of the African Freedom movement, was made by a crew of seven who roamed Johannesburg, Sophiatown and locations prohibited to whites, under the pretense of filming a travelogue. They got out of the country steps ahead of the South African police and the Criminal Investigation Dept.

There are no professional actors here, although Zachariah may well become the movie find of the year. Rogosin spent a year and a half in Africa researching the story, seeking locations, casting among local people, photographing the melting pot of despair which threatens revolution in our time.

THE PICTURE has faults, but against the backdrop of history they are not only excusable but should be overlooked. For one thing, the continuity is choppy. For another, too much has been packed into an hour and a half The photography is spotty, and some scenes are a curious blend of staginess and realism. The lack of narrative may trouble the viewer in the beginning, but the wisdom of it will become apparent before long.

The film is expert on at least two counts: the music is by tribal drums alone, and the message is a double one which the viewer may interpret for himself. One is the abvious plight of the African in an alien society which grinds him into the earth while at the same time exacting his services. The other is the human tragedy which inevitably occurs when white civilization is imposed on primitive peoples. If the numerically outnumbered despots of the Union of South Africa are ever overthrown, the act will be bloody and complete, a harvest richly sown and damningly deserved.

"COME BACK, Africa" is raw, hard and mean. One wishes that its creater had not been under such pressure while making it. But that it had to be made—under whatever conditions—is unquestionable.

It is not a comfortable picture, but it is a smashing blow for freedom which spares no one, certainly not the viewer upon whose conscience "Come Back, Africa" will weigh like a curse.

DIGEST OF THE YIDDISH PRESS

What Good Will It Do U.S. Jews To See Premier Krushchev?

By Rabbi SAMUEL M. SILVER

What good will it do for an American Jewish delegation to see Khrushchev? Not much, believes Ephraim Auerbach, of the Day-Journal, because it is clear what the Soviet line is: there is no anti-Semitism, synagogues are permitted to function in Russia but Jews don't wish to patronize them, Jews are constitutionally protected in the Soviet Union, etc., etc. Perhaps the only value the meeting will be its morale value on Russian Jewry who will be impressed by the fact that the Red premier met with a Jewish group.

Silver

Auerbach is not sure, however, whether Russian Jews will ever hear about the meeting, nor is he sure that the meeting will actually take place, since it is hard to find out whether it has really been ok'd by Khrushchev. In the meantime, when it was announced which members of Mr. K's family will accompany him on his U. S. trip, the Forward broke out with a headline: "Khrushchev Coming without Jewish Daughter-in-Law."

Son of Cantor Strives to Sail 'Peace,' 'Goodwill' to Europe

The sensational idea of building giant "coach ships" which will take passengers across the Atlantic Ocean for $125 is the soon-to-be-realized brain child of a husky, vigorous, extroverted idealist named Hyman Cantor, whom S. Regensberg of the Forward interviewed recently and praises most enthusiastically.

Two ships, to be named Peace and Goodwill, are now a building in German. Why Germany? Because American ship interests have blocked a Maritime Commission ok, says Regensberg.

The enormous ships will feature automats, cafeterias, low-priced department stores, theaters, swimming pools, and everything else. They will also be equipped for floating conventions, with room for thousands of delegates.

Regensberg discovered that the 56-year-old Cantor is the son of a cantor born in Minsk, that from earliest childhood he made a living, that he owns several hotels, that he is active in every Jewish cause and that he is a leader of Temple Isaiah, Kew Gardens, N. Y., and that his rabbi, Jacob Polish, bestowed a special blessing on the enterprise aimed at permitting people of moderate means to travel across the Atlantic, thus enhancing "Peace" and "Goodwill."

Says Clubs' Right To Select Members

By EVELYN LAUTER

CHICAGO (P-O) — "The private club has as much right to restrict its membership as the individual has to bar certain persons from his home," Rabbi Sidney J. Jacobs told Niles Township synagogue last Friday night. His first sermon of the season titled "Tennis, Anyone?" was based on the recent denial of admission to Ralph Bunche, Jr., by a Forest Hills (N. Y.) tennis club.

Unlike the public restaurant the private club does have the right to select its clientele, even though the moral wrong is obvious, Dr. Jacobs pointed out.

In response to a question in Chicago recently Bunche Sr. said that he felt Negroes were indeed making progress but that he for one was not interested in receiving his human rights posthumously.

Authority Credits Middle-Class Life, Strong Family Ties

Few Jews Found in Juvenile Crime

By MYRNA NEURINGER

NEW YORK (P-O) — A policeman's whistle blows, a gang of kids comes rushing from a dark alley and the next day headlines tell of another wave of juvenile delinquency. Delinquency is a problem faced by every community in the country. But for every hundred youngsters arrested in New York City only three will be Jewish.

THE JEWISH juvenile delinquent is different from both the non-Jewish delinquent of today and the Jewish delinquent of 30 years ago, says Sophia M. Robison, assistant director of the Juvenile Delinquency Evaluation Project of the City of New York.

Mrs. Robison has found that the difference between Sammy Schwartz and John Jones is that unlike John who comes from a broken home and lives in a slum area, Sammy comes from a good home and lives in a nice residential neighborhood. Also, John will usually be arrested for burglary, stealing or running away, while most of the Sammys are arrested for auto stealing, injury to other people, or ungovernable behavior.

THIRTY YEARS ago Sammy's father would most likely have been arrested for begging or peddling without a license (he also would most likely have been arrested in Brooklyn—near Coney Island to be exact).

The major reason for this change and difference is that today most Jews are in the middle class.

"Thus," says Mrs. Robison, "as each group becomes more middle class, there is less delinquency among that group. And as the Jewish group becomes more like the non-Jewish group, the delinquency becomes more middle class."

ALTHOUGH approximately 225 Jewish youngsters are arrested each year, less than one-fourth of these youngsters are ever sent to institutions. The rest either have the case against them dismissed or are placed on probation.

A representative from a Jewish Welfare agency such as the Jewish Board of Guardians is always present in court whenever a Jewish boy or girl is brought in. The respresentative usually asks that the youngster be placed in the custody of the agency, where he receives guidance and treatment.

MRS. ROBISON believes that more research is needed in the area of Jewish delinquency. She points out that the only other ethnic group with as low as rate of delinquency in New York City is the Chinese. Both the Jewish and Chinese groups are identified by their strong family and group ties. This might prove to be one of the reasons for the low rate of delinquency amongst Jews.

A washable and sun-proof bulletin board insert (also called removeable inner board) has been developed by the Universal Bulletin Board co. inc. The insert's attractive appearance shows through in the picture of the bulletin board above. Shazar's Name on Ballot Appears as Rubashov

JERUSALEM (P-O)—It may confuse voters, and won't help Zalman Shazar, chairman of the Jewish Agency executive, in his election campaign, but the Jerusalem District Court has ruled that Shazar's name on the ballots will be listed as Rubashov. The court ruled that Shazar had never legally changed his name.

Why should RABBIS' WIVES have life insurance?

Now, wives of rabbis, cantors and rabbinical students are entitled to benefit by the "preferred risk" low rates offered by Ministers Life & Casualty Union.

While there is no substitute for adequate life insurance on the part of the father and breadwinner in the family, there are three good reasons why wives should have a life insurance policy as well: (1) On the average, a final illness and burial expense amounts to $2,000 or more; (2) Protection for the children, including a housekeeper; (3) Endowment policy to supplement the husband's Social Security—whether the husband is living or not.

And you can get this important coverage whether or not your husband has a Ministers Life policy — providing that your husband is in full-time religious work. There's no obligation whatsoever in writing for complete data. It may mean the difference between security and hardship for the ones you love.

YOM TOV ONLY WEEKS AWAY—KEEP RECIPES HANDY

By SARAH LIEBER

With lunch boxes to pack, and with the social season starting again full blast, it's time to think of baking.

The cookie jar is the best insurance for drop-in-guest refreshments. Cookies keep very well, if properly stored in airtight containers.

Sarah

Some cakes will keep for days, too. And of course, you may freeze the surplus.

On a baking day, try doubling the output and freezing half.

Incidentally, children love to bake, or at least to help with the preparations. And no youngster is too small to lend a hand. The measuring helps teach arithmetic, too. And chopping nuts, greasing pans and spreading frosting are easy tasks for little fingers.

Below are some recipes I think the whole family will enjoy. And by the way, with the yomim tovim only a few weeks off, why don't you clip these recipes and have them ready for holiday entertaining?

ORANGE NUT CAKE

¾ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
1 tblsp. grated orange rind
1 tsp. vanilla
3 eggs
1 cup orange marmalade
1 cup chopped nuts
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1½ tsps. baking soda
1 tsp. salt
½ cup orange juice
½ cup evaporated milk

Cream together butter, sugar, rind and vanilla until fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating after each addition. Stir in marmalade and nuts. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with the juice and evaporated milk which have been combined. Turn into a greased and lined nine-inch tube pan. Bake one hour at 350 degrees. Cool cake in the pan for 10 minutes before removing. Serve as is or with orange topping spooned over hot cake.

FLORIDA ORANGE TOPPING

1 cup orange juice
1 cup sugar

Stir over moderate heat until sugar dissolves.

BROWNIE STICKS

½ cup butter or margarine
2 squares baking chocolate (2 oz.)
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ cup flour
1 tsp. vanilla
½ cup chopped nuts
walnut halves for garnish

Melt butter or margarine and chocolate over hot water in double boiler. Beat eggs until light and fluffy. Gradually add sugar and continue beating until mixture is thick and creamy. Add melted chocolate and butter. Blend well. Stir in flour, flavoring and nuts. Spread evenly in a greased nine-inch square pan. Garnish with walnut halves pressed into top. Bake 30 to 35 minutes at 350 degrees. While still warm, cut into bars about 1 by 3 inches.

OATMEAL BARS

½ cup soft butter or shortening
1 cup light brown sugar, firmly packed
2½ cups raw oatmeal
1 tsp. vanilla

Cream the butter or shortening. Gradually blend in sugar and beat until light in color and free of lumps. Add oatmeal and vanilla. Press into lightly greased eight-inch square pan. Bake 15 to 20 minutes at 400 degrees. Cut into bars 1 by 2 inches, while still warm.

SOUR CREAM OATMEAL COOKIES

⅓ cup shortening
⅔ cup sugar
1 egg
⅓ cup cour cream
⅔ cup potato starch
¼ cup corn starch
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup raw oatmeal

Cream shortening until fluffy. Add sugar and beat until thick and creamy. Beat in egg. Add potato starch sifted with the corn starch, baking powder and salt, alternating with sour cream. Stir in oatmeal. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a greased cookie sheet. Bake 12 to 15 minutes at 350 degrees.

Cover Carefully All Cake You Are Going to Freeze

If you are freezing cakes, pies or other baked goods, be sure to cover with foil or plastic and seal carefully. Label for quick identification.

Frostings do not freeze well, so leave the decorating for serving day.

Friends Stream to Comfort Us--We Wish Mama Could See Them

By CARL ALPERT

BOSTON, Mass. — From east and from west, scattered thousands of miles appart, the family has gathered to pay last respects to mama.

Our grief is like that experienced by all children when the time comes for their mother to leave; but not until one has experienced it personally can one understand the depth of the feeling. I suppose that each family sets up its own precise forms of internal relationship. In our home we never called her mother. Somehow, that sounded affected. To us she was simply ma, or mama.

Alpert

The words had their own connotations . . . of the special dishes she would cook, of her washing and ironing for us, of the darning of our socks, of her baking and housecleaning, of her ministrations to us when we were ill. . . .

WHEN THE first shock wore off, the time came to prepare a brief obituary notice for the local newspaper. The family naturally turned to the "writer" to pen that article, but words would not come.

What should an objective obit say? What would be of interest to the general reader Naturally it must list the prominent position held in public life, the organizations which she had led, the communal activities . . . But for mama there had been none of these. She had been member of several groups, but prominent in none. She had attended meetings, but had always been one of those who sat quietly in the side seats while others presided, or made speeches or moved resolutions. No, there was nothing here that could provide material for an obituary notice. The painful duty became difficult.

MAMA HAD no career outside of her home. She had no ambitions for herself—only for her children and her husband. For these she lived. She shunned the center of the stage, and even at home gatherings, she was happiest when one of the others occupied the limelight. She would sit back, with folded hands, a light shining in her eyes, when one of the family was holding forth on his own career, or describing his children . . . her grandchildren. Or she would be in the kitchen preparing the refreshments for the party. Mama always did things herself. And if one of us would go into the kitchen to help, she would shoo us back into the living room to entertain the company. She was an old-fashioned mother.

There is much in the modern mother to be admired, I know. They are busy and active. Some carry on two careers simultaneously and successfully. Some run their homes like a business firm. For all their modernity, they do not neglect their children, and do not love their families less. But there were certain qualities and graces which existed in the old-fashion mother, and which are disappearing with her. They were qualities of humility, of undiluted devotion, of singleness of purpose . . . This was true of a whole generation of these old-fashioned mothers, and not merely of my own mother.

AS YOUNGSTERS we were not always understanding, in the manner of youth. She was always gentle and patient.

"Wait until you are older and have your own children," she would say. "Then you will understand." How true! Would that we could be as patient with our own children as she was with us

FOR A WEEK we have sat, in stockinged feet, on low benches, consoling ourselves with our memories. And through the open front door there has streamed a parade of relatives, friends and acquaintances. People whom we have not seen for 30 years have come to pay their respects. Friends of the children, and friends of papa, and friends of mama, have come to sit with us, and to console us, and to cheer us up a bit.

The conversation has veered to many topics, and the discussion has frequently become animated.

That is as it should be, for the mourners should not be left alone to sink in their grief. Without any of the gayety or the exuberance of a party, we have nevertheless had a week of constant entertaining. Reminiscences have flooded in upon us. And each of us felt: If only mama had been here. How she would have enjoyed this. All her life she had sat in the background. For the first time, she was the primary center of interest . . . the magnet which drew all these hundreds of people here for this sad occasion . . . and she was not here to see it and experience it.

GOD BLESSED mama. The end came quickly, peacefully, quietly. I do believe she never knew that she was dying.

When the time came she said: "Don't worry about me . . . I'll be all right." Then she closed her eyes and went to sleep.

WOMEN'S VIEWPOINT

Parents Have Duty to Meddle In Lives of Married Children

By HELEN COHEN

People are so fool set on being independent nowadays that families have to watch out they don't bend over too far backward not interfering with somebody else's business.

JUST WHAT is interfering and what isn't?

Take this young couple getting a divorce and starting a fight over the custody of their two children:

THE FATHER of the son writes a letter in the daily News "Golden Years" columnist Thomas Collins telling of this unfortunate situation and explaining that he, grampa, had just retired and what would Collins advise.

Did Collins advise grampa to stay out of his son's affairs? Not Collins.

HERE IS his answer, in full, and I don't know about you but it makes good sense to me.

"Something. Just what would depend on the circumstances.

"This is one place where retired parents, for their own selfish benefit as well as for the children's, should stick their noses into their children's affairs. They have wisdom their children don't have to pull fat out of the fire.

"For example: A couple facing a problem similar to this recently took $1,500 of their savings, handed it to their son and his wife, told them to go to San Juan, Puerto Rico, for a vacation alone, and leave the children with them. It worked, because in this case all diapers and no play had so frustrated a young wife that romance was fading away.

"Many things ruin a marriage — bills, loneliness, lack of privacy and either the man, or woman, finding outside the home what he needs inside it.

"Parents of retirement age can understand. They shouldn't stand aside, but hunt for the cause and, even if they have to push their weight around, try to cure it."

Parents Who Want to 'Marry-Off' Children Should Start Sooner

I read not long ago, among the POST and OPINION classified section advertisements, an ad in which a father offers his daughter's hand in marriage. If I recall correctly, she is 38, 5 foot, pretty, has nice position, and the father mentioned something about $10,000 and setting the young man up in business.

Now I ask you. As long as such a proposition is going to be made, wouldn't it have been better made when the girl is 14, before life has beaten her down with the knowledge that she is unwanted?

Give me the good old days.

ARE OUR RABBIS GREAT?

We have never heard anyone as enthusiastic about the American rabbinate as Prof. Abraham N. Franzblau, who teaches pastorial psychiatry at Hebrew Union college-Jewish Institute of Religion.

WE HAD thought that The Jewish POST and OPINION was the extreme example, leading as it has been for almost two decades now in preaching the theme of an emergent, creative Jewish life in America.

But our observations of the American rabbinate lead us to differ with Dr. Franzblau at the risk of losing our leadership in this respect.

WHEN ASKED last week at the B'nai B'rith institute of Judaism of the Rocky Mountain states why there had been no great Jewish minds since the days of the prophets, Dr. Franzblau mentioned Maimonides and Einstein and then went on to praise the rabbinate today, which he said has great minds that the future might classify with the greatest of Jewish history.

Our view is that U. S. Jewry is moving out of the crass materialism of the past few decades despite our rabbis. The B'nai B'rith institute of Judaism, a good example of a tremendous force for good in Jewish education, was the product not of rabbis but of two laymen—I. D. Blumenthal and Maurice Weinstein of Charlotte, N. C. Herzl was divorced from Jewish life.

HISTORY WILL show that the rabbis had fallen victim to, if not actually led, the flight from anything Jewish, which characterized life in the U. S. in the 1920s and 1930s.

The world required of the rabbi that he be an orator and be willing at the same time to forget the "yoke of Heaven," which Dr. Franzblau used at Estes Park to indicate Jewish obligations, to be successful. If he winked at every desecration of Jewish values and smiled at all the women, his success was assured.

FORTUNATELY THE new generation of rabbis is devoted and conscientious. The unctuous rabbi we still have with us, but his day will soon end!

The great future of American Jewry will come when rabbis and laymen join hands in creating Jewish insights and values which will guide the modern Jew, perhaps even the world, toward new heights on the road to the messianic ideal.

THE SUMMER IS OVER

The advent of September—even though this year the High Holy Days fall in October—means once again the resumption of organized Jewish life in America.

ORGANIZATIONS BEGIN to vie for membership; the opening fall meetings will be held; Jewish schools open their doors again; and Jewish life as a whole quickens.

But not everything is the same as it has been for these last 25 to 35 years.

WHEREAS JEWISH LIFE in America revolved almost exclusively around organizations and fund-raising, now it is clear that the synagogue has once again assumed its central role. When the B'nai B'rith or Hadassah, the National Council of Jewish Women or the Zionist Organization of America, had held its final meeting in May or June, the synagogue succumbed to the trend also and shut down for the summer.

But for several years now, in some cases as many as 10, whereas a tight lid was clamped on meetings and fund-raising, synagogue services went on right through the summer as if God forwent his vacation.

THIS IS another aspect of the normalization of Jewish life you will be learning about for the next decade and more. Values will be more consistent. It won't be the fund-raiser or the member-getters who will be honored, but the scholar and the pious one. Our boards of synagogues will not be filled by those who show their loyalty by their unvarying absence from Saturday services, and the president of the sisterhood won't prove her fitness for the position by visiting the hairdresser promptly each Saturday at the start of services.

The abnormalities of Jewish life still predominate, but their days are numbered. We may not become observant overnight, but that does not mean that we will continue to worship the false gods of material wealth.

SEPTEMBER 11, 1959

The EDITOR'S CHAIR . . .

When Daniel Frisch was president of the Zionist Organization of America, one of the planks in his program he was able to implement was to abolish the U. S. training farms where young people interested in going to Israel learned how to become farmers and artisans. The theory was sound—let the young people go directly to Israel where under actual conditions of Israeli life itself rather than under simulated conditions in the U. S., they could learn to adapt.

GOLDA MEIR, on her return from her triumphant South American tour, came to the same conclusion. She found the training farms there poorly supervised and lacking proper guidance.

But Eliahu Dobkin, who learned the hard way through Dan Frisch's mistake of using logic for experience, rejected Mrs. Meir's arguments. The scheme of bringing the young people to Israel failed to consider that this was asking for the second step before the first was made. A young American Jew might go to live on a training farm even if he still harbored some doubts about living in Israel, but he'd never go to Israel first, because that was the irrevocable step.

THEN THE training farms in the U. S. were closed down, aliya to Israel died out. It just no longer exists. This was a case of throwing out the dirty water before clean was available. The training farms may not have been the perfect answer, but their shutting down was fatal to aliya.

Incidentally, while on the subject of aliya, we note that a conference on aliya will be held next month in Britain under the auspices of the Zionist Federation.

SUCH A conference should be held now in the U. S., if we have any true Zionist leadership. We attended the first and last conference on aliya in New York about five years ago. Mrs. Rose Halprin representing Hadassah torpedoed the deliberations.

Maybe the new Hadassah leadership holds different views, and maybe those who opposed aliya by watering down the action of the conference into meaningless resolutions have changed their views. It's worth looking into, we feel. A true Zionist just doesn't give up because of hardships or an unfavorable climate.

MANY AMERICAN Jews are living in Israel now contributing their share to the upbuilding of the state. Many more could be useful in hundreds of ways, living examples of the experiences and determination acquired by life in a western democracy.

No one will want to tell someone else that he ought to go to Israel to live.

But neither should the avenue of a future for American Jews in Israel be closed altogether as it is, almost, now.

Your Name . .

By N. PEARLROTH

Want to know what your name means? Address your questions to Mr. Pearlroth, National Jewish POST and OPINION, Box 1633, Indianapolis 6, Indiana.

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: What of the name JOLLES or YOLLES? It is my mother's maiden name, and the family was from Austria, near Lemberg (Galicia, actually, I think). The Jolles family is proud of its heritage—but what is the origin, please? Thank you for your interesting service.—KATIE S. FRIEDMAN, Irvington 11, N. J.

JOLLES—more correctly Yolles —is a patronymic, a family name derived from the Hebrew name of an ancestor. The original name was Joel (Yoel) and Yolles means "Yoel's descendant(s)." Jacob Jolles (1778-1825) a celebrated Talmudist and Kabbalist was the Rabbi of Dynow and Glogow, Galicia, while Zecharya Jolles was rabbi in Lemberg. It is possible that you are descended from them. The name is also borne by many other families, described from a patriarch named Joel.

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: Would appreciate any information on the origin of my name—Perczyk. I come from Zaslov, Wolyn Gubernya. My paternal grandfather, I was told, originally came from around Rumania (not certain of this information). — WILLIAM PARKER, M.D., St. Louis 1, Mo.

PERCZYK — more correctly Pierczyk—is a curious trade name. It is an obsolete Polish term describing an unlicensed lawyer, defender, attorney or anyone of a litigious nature. Russian Jews did not assume permanent family names till 1804 and it is certain that your ancestor at the time had this curious vocation. The unlicensed attorney filled a great need in the Jewish economic status of the Russia of 150 years ago and was a position commanding respect. I keep thinking what a wonderful vignette of your ancestor this name presents.

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: Will you please define the name of Rosenwasser. My people came from Austro-Hungary. I have met some people by the same name from Russia and Poland, but we were not related. I had been told that my family had been a very large one in Hungary. I would like to know where it originated. Thank you.—FRED A. ROSENWASSER, Cleveland 18, Ohio.

ROSENWASSER is a cosmetic preparation consisting of water mixed with rose oil in a ratio of four drops of oil to 11 drops of water. The mixture was used as a beauty preparation as well as a kitchen ingredient. But your family name has no connection with that. Rosenwasser as a family name is an evolution of the word "wasser" (water) appended for the sake of alleged euphony. The Rose in question was an ancestress of your family who was honored for her influence and standing.

Visit to Warsaw Ghetto Political; Asks Support for Nixon By Jews

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION

So Nixon has visited the Warsaw ghetto! Bravo! I suuppose inbetween visits to the "restricted" hotels in Florida, which don't patraonage of the vice-president of the U. S., Nixon get this "deep concern" over predjudice against the Jews. And I suppose our gullible Jews will swallow that gesture hook, line and sinker!

THE TRUTH is, nothing that politician will do will expiate the Republican administration's sins against Israel.

Consider Eisenhower's "solemn pledge" to the American people, during the sanctions debate, to halt Egypt if she tried to prevent Israeli shipping through the Suez Canal. To those Americans with short memories, I quote the President's words of Feb. 20, 1957:

"WE SHOULD not assume that if Israel withdraws, Egypt will prevent Israeli shipping from using the Suez Canal or the Gulf of Aqaba. If unhappily, Egypt does violate the armistice agreement or other international agreements, then this should be dealt with firmly by the society of nations."

All of us are witnesses to how firmly Eisenhower is dealing with Nasser.

Wouldn't Ignore Flies, Crime or Judaism Council

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION

In this week's "Editor's Chair" you printed my recent letter to you and in the editorial comment that followed you stated: "The theme underlying the letter is that we ought to ignore the Council for Judaism."

Nothing could be further from the truth.

To ignore the council, to ignore mosquitoes, to ignore flies, to ignore anti-Semites, to ignore crime, in fact to ignore anything unwholesome breeds more unwholesomeness, and I can't for a moment understand how you were able to read such a thing in my letter. On the contrary please keep exposing and hitting at these unhappy Jews for after all they are entitled to be unhappy as I know no one, individually or collectively, who has worked so hard at being unhappy.

The theme of my letter was simply this—we must not be too quick to reject an appellation that we should be proud of, and there is no greater honor for any Jew than the honor of being told that he has a loyalty to his fellow Jews, to the land of his fathers, to the land of his birth, and to his God, as well as to the land of his abode.

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION

Rabbi Silver's column in The National Jewish POST and OPINION, referring to Vice-President Nixon's statement at the Warsaw Ghetto, gives little tribute to the courage displayed by Nixon and applauded by Jews who read the news in the daily press.

IT IS SHAMEFUL that the Jewish press, on the whole, has given Nixon so little favorable space. He has done much in behalf of Jews and all minorities, as attested by the honors bestowed upon him by Yeshiva University and other Jewish organizations.

I think it is time for the Jewish press of this country to help wash away the smears and false propaganda spread by cheap, selfish politicians interested in their own little baliwicks instead of their people!

MORE AND more Jews are opening their eyes to the "real Nixon," as he is, not to the so-called "new Nixon."

They are less and less inclined to be persuaded by claims of what happened in state elections many years ago—and they look at the true record of the man open to all. And the record is that of a man capable, experienced, and deserving of occupancy in the White House.

WHO PLAYED HATIKVA? I DID

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION

In boldface letters I read in your Aug. 14 issue of the "Post," Who Dared Play Hatikva At Soviet Exhibition?

I was both surprised and pleased to read it, for I am the one who has left that imprint upon those who heard my rendition of Hatikva.

While on vacation in New York last month, my husband, son and I visited the Coliseum Among the many interesting things we saw, the Estoni grand piano looked so inviting to me, those keys staring right at me.

My husband said, "Go play Hatikva," which I did. I sensed eyes upon me, but this did not bother me, for I was carried away expressing myself through the Israel anthem.

It was an enjoyable experience and I am glad that those who heard it, derived pleasure from it.

Glad Her Children Too Young to Read About Yael Dayan

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION

After reading the remarks of Yael Dayan in the interview reported in the Aug. 21 issue of The National Jewish POST and OPINION, I was very happy that my two pre-school age children are too young to be exposed to Miss Dayan's opinions. I was happy that my children are too young to be admirers of this young Israeli author who says that "Life is free in Israel" and that in her opinion the majority of Israeli girls have affairs before they marry.

While Miss Dayan states that she identifies herself with everything Jewish, she immediately proceeds to destroy everything Jewish. She feels that Jewish religious law need not be observed and that intermarriage is apparently Jewish since she said that she wouldn't mind marrying a non-Jew.

It is unfortunate that the opinions of this immature young lady who claims to know what G-d desires of man better than the Prophets and Sages should get so much publicity and admiration.

LAMBASTS P-O BUT LOVES IT

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION

Regarding my subscription, you are:

1) Too sensational.
2) Too full of factual errors.
3) Too much emphasis on religious controversy — Orthodox vs. Reform, etc. (letters, letters, ugh!).
4) Not enough real news—too much junk.
5) Too much Council for Judaism—all nauseating.
6) Just a louzy paper.

But I love you just the same . . .

For my patience I should have at least a year's complimentary subscription . . .

U.S. JEWS COULD BE ORAGNIZED QUICKLY

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION

As a regular reader of The National Jewish POST and OPINION, I was deeply impressed by some of the observations on the subject of a divided Jewish community and the little interest shown in the fourth plenary assembly of the World Jewish Congress (P-O, July 31).

AS REPORTED it is apparent that more interest should be shown in a world pilgrimage of Jews, with the manifold problems facing them.

The reason for this apathy is a divided community. There are one or two powerfully entrenched organizations which are adamantly opposed to a unified Jewish community. Excuses such as being submerged, losing their identity, organizational autonomy, or possessing a distinct ideology, have been the reasons advanced by the American Jewish Committee and the B'nai B'rith for refusing to join an ill-inclusive democratically constituted Jewish agency which would be empowered to speak and act for the community.

Even the NCRAC, as now constituted, is a non-binding consultative body or organizations where each can take unilateral action whenever it chooses to do so — a far cry from what the Jewish community desires.

AFTER YEARS of study of this problem, Prof. McKiver presented a plan whereby each organization would assume a task it is best fitted to perform and at the same time retain its identity and autonomy. The Jewish communities enthusiastically endorsed the McKiver report and its recommendations, but the American Jewish Committee and B'nai B'rith vehemently rejected it. As you well pointed out, the American Jewish Committee favors a world Jewish body of its own without consultation or interference.

You state that the American Jewish Committee and the American Jewish Congress both have prospered as a result of the split, and the B'nai B'rith has lost little. That may or may not be so. But what about the Jewish community? Is this competition, division, duplication and waste in its interest?

THE CRUCIAL observation you make is that "The United States Jewish community has a great deal to learn from Canadian Jewry. The Canadian Jewish Congress permits all the freedom of discussion and is still the lone representative of Canadian Jewry."

Mark the difference: What Bronfman accomplished in Canada, the late Dr. Stephen S. Wise, with his power and influence, failed to accomplish in the United States. The reason is simple. In the United States, as well as in Canada, the philanthropic purse strings are controlled by men of wealth. It seems, therefore, within their exclusive power to democratise the Jewish community.

I KNOW at least a dozen men of wealth in the United States, any one of whom has the power, if he chose to, to undertake the task of organizing the American Jewish community on a democratic basis and could accomplish it in short order.

Unfortunately, these men to whom I refer are either captives of a particular circle, or are indifferent, or are oblivious of the need to democratize or unify the Jewish community . . .

Choir Was City-Wide, Education Director Says

• Editor Jewish POST and OPINION

A letter which appeared in the July 10 issue under the title "School Keeps Jewish Music Alive, as Weinstein Suggests," signed by Herman Hersh, director of music, Louis Feinberg Synagog, Cincinnati, tells of the participation of the Feinberg synagog school choir in the Cincinnati symphony orchestra performances of Hovey's "Sholem Aleichem Suite" in 1958 and of Handel's oratorio "Judas Maccabaeus" in 1959.

What the writer omits, I am sure unintentionally, is that it was not the Feinberg Synagog School Choir alone that participated in these symphony programs, but the combined chorus of all religious and Hebrew school choirs of Cincinnati, under the auspices of the local bureau of Jewish education. This combined chorus is officially known as the bureau of Jewish education children's chorus under which name it appeared on the Symphony program book.

Incidentally, Mr. Hersh did a very creditable job as music coordinator of the project.

Mapai Would Install U.S. Election System

JERUSALEM (P-O) — If the Mapai party wins a majority in the upcoming elections, it will immediately dissolve the knesset in order to bring about voting by constituencies as in the U. S., Ben-Gurion announced this week. At present, a voter casts a ballot for the entire list put up by the various parties. Those elected have responsibility not to any electoral area of the nation such as in the U. S. congress, but to the party which nominated them.
